BEHAVIOUR-BRAIN-BODY RESEARCH CENTRE

This new research centre brings together expertise in sleep, nutrition and physical activity, and their combined impact on chronic illness. Behavioural risk factors such as inadequate sleep, poor diet and lack of exercise are significant contributors to unhealthy lifestyles. Based at Magill Campus, our researchers are focused on understanding how these key areas can be used as predictors of fetal health, resilient school learners, metabolic disease in shift workers, impairment in high performance environments, cognitive functioning through cancer treatment and early indicators of dementia risk.
