Experimenta Playground

29 August – 17 October 2008
Gallery 1 and 2
Co-curators: Liz Hughes and Emma McRae

Escape into Experimenta Playground, an exhibition of artworks that beg to be touched and invite your interaction. Experience a digital media playground of interactive artworks, video installations, short films and extreme art on screen by over 30 Australian and international artists. Experimenta Playground is a free exhibition that promises an unforgettable experience. Experience for yourself contemporary art that made 44,043 people in Melbourne smile. Audience comments included:

Fantastic. It’s amazing that this is free. Excellent interactivity. Very cool! Awesome and interesting.

Experimenta commissioned three interactive artworks for the exhibition including a deliciously impetuous and humorous piece by Sydney duo, Jaki Middleton and David Lawrey. Titled What’s Yours is Mine visitors peer into a Magic Faraway Tree to get a glimpse into a fairytale forest in which a virtual bear pays homage to pioneer video artist Bruce Nauman. Immersion by Angela Barnett, Andrew Buchanan, Darren Ballingall, Chris MacKellar and Christian Rubino is a treat for the senses as it lets visitors play with sea creatures in a virtual underwater world. Charmed by Priscilla Bracks, Gavin Sade and Matt Dwyer offers omnipotence through a touch screen as the artwork invites visitors to tinker with the lives of animated people in a tabletop city. International artists include Fischli and Weiss, Hiraki Sawa, Guy Ben-Ner and June Bum Park. Australian artists featured include Shaun Gladwell, whose video art was shown at the 2007 Venice Biennale of Contemporary Art, Daniel Crooks, Narinda Reeder and Stelarc.

In enjoyable and sometimes surprising ways, the artists examine the role of play in social behaviour, the creation of identity and our creativity. “Experimenta Playground draws together a collection of artworks that encourage playfulness, placing the audience in a central role in bringing the exhibition to life,” said Liz Hughes, co-curator and Artistic Director of Experimenta. “The artworks reinvent old games and our known environment, push the boundaries of cinematic language and reveal narratives in the most unexpected places,” continues Emma McRae, co-curator.
After Adelaide the exhibition continues its national tour to galleries in cities and regional centres including Perth, Bendigo and Albury. Experimenta, Australia’s powerhouse of media art, has been delighting audiences in Australia and overseas for 22 years. Previous touring exhibitions, including Experimenta Vanishing Point and Experimenta House of Tomorrow, have been enjoyed by hundreds of thousands of people nationwide.

Complementing Experimenta Playground is the regional forum – Media Art Curating – to be presented in the Bradley Forum located alongside the Museum in the Hawke Building, Level 5, on Friday 29 August from 2–5pm. Bookings essential: samstagmuseum@unisa.edu.au

Media Art Curating looks at video installations, interactive artworks and multimedia (now part of mainstream contemporary visual arts and growing in popularity), and how we should program these works into exhibitions and add them to collections.

Exhibition hours: Tuesday to Friday 11–5pm, Sunday 2–5pm. The exhibition will also be open 2–5pm Saturday 21 June and 2–5pm every Saturday during SALA Festival, 1 – 17 August.
